Short Bio (anglais)

Michel DUCLOS is research director (1st class) at INRA, where he led the Poultry Research Unit (Unité de Recherches Avicoles) from 2008 to 2016 (about 50 INRA holders). Since 2017, he is the coordinator of the Feed and Breeding System team (AliSé) in this unit, and co-responsible of the UMT BIRD ASTER program, a collaboration program between INRA and the Technical Institutes (ITAVI, SYSAAF and ITAB) under the auspice of the French Ministry of Agriculture. Responsible with Pr B. LAURIOUX of the work package "Gastronomie Santé Bien-Etre" of the interdisciplinary program "Intelligence des Patrimoines" (ARD2020-I-Pat), he is also a member of the Steering committee of the "Pôle Alimentation" of the University of Tours, a multidisciplinary exchange structure on food issues. Graduate of the National Veterinary School of Lyon (2005), DVM (1990), PhD of the University Paris-6 (1990, speciality Animal Physiology), holder of an HDR of the University of Tours, Dr. Michel DUCLOS has written numerous articles on the physiology and genetics of poultry (65). He has also given numerous lectures in France and abroad on these subjects (20), and has led the scientific organization of international congresses in the field of poultry science (European Poultry Conference, 2010) and, more specifically, the quality of poultry meat (Eggmeat 2015). He is a member of the board of the French branch of the World Poultry Science Association, of which he was secretary from 2013 to 2017. He has also been active at the European Federation of WPSA Branches and has led the European Working Group "Poultry Meat Quality" from 2010 to 2014. Michel Duclos is also a member of the steering committee of the Master of Science "Physiopathology" at the University of Tours.
