Short bio (anglais)

Luca UZIELLI was born in Florence (Italy) in 1943, and until 2014 was Full Professor of "Wood Technology" at Faculty of Agriculture and Forestry - University of Florence

Graduated in 1961 from a "Classical" general High School in Florence, received a degree in Mechanical Engineering in 1971 from University of Bologna, and in 1971-72 served as drafted Lieutenant in Italian Army's Engineering Corps.

Developed his scientific and teaching activity mainly at University of Florence, and performed many study visits abroad, in Europe, USA, and other areas of the world. Has headed several national and international research projects, and organized several national and international congresses. Member of several Standardization Committees (UNI, CEN, ISO) in the Wood and Cultural Heritage sector.

Member in several scientific or professional Societies or Institutions, including: Accademia Italiana di Scienze forestali (Italian Academy of Forest Sciences); AIGR Associazione Italiana di Genio rurale (Italian Society of Agricultural Engineers); Accademia dei Georgofili; IAWS (International Academy of Wood Science); International Wood Committee of ICOMOS (International Council on Monuments and Sites)

Has been Chairman of COST Action IE0601 "Wood Science for Conservation of Cultural Heritage" (2007-2011).

Author or co-Author of over 150 publications, including technical and scientific papers and chapters in textbooks, covering mainly a) Properties, test methods, standardization, uses of wood species and wood products, including tropical woods and structural uses of timber, and b) Conservation of wooden objects and artworks belonging to Cultural Heritage (panel paintings, timber structures, wooden sculptures, etc.).

Has taught university courses concerning Wood Science and Technology from 1979 to 2015, and in PhD curricula as well.

In 1996-2007 was Chairman of University graduate course (3 years) in Wood Technology. Has been Director of over 120 Graduation final works, and of 12 PhD Theses (three of which in co-direction with foreign Colleagues). Since 1992, Partner or Coordinator of "Tempus" and other cooperation programs with Agricultural University of Tirana (Albania), from which he received in 2006 the title of "Doctor Honoris Causa".

Retired in 2014 due to age limits, is in the process of being awarded the title of Professor Emeritus. He is presently dealing mainly with Conservation of wooden Cultural Heritage (technological evaluation of panel paintings; relationships between environmental thermo-hygrometric parameters, their variations, distortion dynamics of panel paintings, consequent stresses, damage of paint layers, etc.) in cooperation with several outstanding Italian and foreign institutions in charge of restoration and conservation of artworks.
